

Cancer UPDATE and A Little Fixer Upper

First news First:

Roger's brain scan in CLEAR. Praise be!! I am so thrilled!! It's been the best news.

Onto the evening post...

Hubby and I went to town...It's a sad state that I've gotten old enough that I end up going to town simply to get a prescription filled. At 20 years old I never imagined that would be my life, but here I am.

But you all know me better than that. I went to town to go thrifting and just "happened" to need medicine too...at least that's the way I'm selling it to myself.

So thrifting I found this...

It's a super cute picnic basket. I love the plaid bottom.

I immediately went to buy it but second guessed myself when I saw this...

Ah. The owner had written her name in permanent marker across the top. For $2 (yes that as the price), I decided to gamble.

I got out some 100 grit sandpaper and just like that, I sanded off her name. It didn't even take me a minute to sand the name off.

Then I got out my trusty Old English Scratch Cover. (Amazon Link HERE) and applied it over the top. I used the LIGHT version this time. For most other scratch cover ups, I use the dark version (Amazon Link HERE) The stuff is amazing!!

Check this out...it is now in tip top condition. It looks SO-SO nice now. No one would ever believe it if I didn't take pictures.

Here's a close up...

The whole project took about 4 minutes...no joke.

Oh, I'm so happy with this piece. This one will be in our antique booth in Harmony soon. I hope someone else loves it as much as I do.
