

Charity Quilt Finish

I finished up a charity quilt...but I am really upset with myself. I can't say for sure who sent this one to me.

I quilted it sometime ago. I had the intention to bind it right away. Well it didn't get bound and didn't get bound. Finally this week I had a little bit of time and decided to tackle it. I looked everywhere but the note saying who it was from is gone. I looked and looked and can't find it anywhere.

I thought and thought and couldn't remember and then I remembered the awesome box of goodies that this came in...books and toys for the childcare kids and quilt tops for me. It was Julie that send this!!

I love the quilt. When I first saw the top I was shocked how simple the construction was yet the quilt was still so cute. I can see a little girl loving this one.

I just did a simple circle inside a circle. The quilt is so busy that it's really had to keep my place when I am doing free motion if I try any design that is more complex. So a simple circle inside a circle was an easy choice. The thread is variegated pastel. I have learned to like that on lots of tops.

The back of the quilt got a variegated pink thread.

The backing fabric was something I had here..and the binding fabric was from a donated amount of fabric. The batting was donated too. I think it's so neat to see how many people come together to get a charity quilt to completion. Thanks to all.

Right now I have this one in the charity pile waiting for someone in need. Two weeks ago I sent out a big box full to Quilts of Compassion.

A big thanks to all who made this cute quilt happen...

To see other finished quilts check out Confessions of a Fabric Addict, Michelle's Romantic Tangle, Crazy Mom Quilts, and Link a Finish Friday.