

Friday Finish: Pin Up Star Table Runner and Free Pattern

If you are new to the blog, welcome. You have reached an archived FREE table runner pattern. We typically put up new blog post twice daily so there is always something new and fresh here. Click HERE and see what's new today...

Some time ago Kelli and I participated in a quilt along featured by Quilting Galley. We came up with a block that we really liked with a pinwheel inside a star. I like it so much that I even designed a quilt and table runner that used the block. Only problem, we ran out of time and didn't get either the table runner or the quilt made. Awhile ago Kelli got the table runner sewn and finally, I got it quilted and bound.

For the quilting, I used a light brown thread and a VERY simple quilting design.

The table runner is pretty big. It ends up being 17" x 53". I think it will look nice on the table in the house in town. There I will be able to keep all of the leaves in the table thus supporting a large runner.

To make the table runner you need the printable directions to make the block which you can find here. To get the expanded directions to make the table runner, click on this link, Pinup Star Table Runner, for the free printable pattern. I will put a link to this blog post on the right side bar of the blog so you can easily find the link back to this pattern. Look for it under the name Pin Up Star Table Runner.

I would still like to make the quilt that I designed with the block...Isn't that just like a quilter? We're always looking ahead to our next project rather than basking in the accomplishment of having a project finished.
