

Kayla's Weekend Charmer

You have reached and archived free pattern. If you are new to the blog, welcome. You have reached an archived free pattern. We typically put up new blog post twice daily so there is always something new and fresh here. Click HERE and see what's new today...

Kayla brought a quilt top for me to quilt for her. It's a cutie and it's simple and easy...it's one of Kayla's designs.

She did it as a free pattern on her blog with instructions broken up into three different days. You can find the instructions by following the links.

Day Two: Sewing a block together

Day Three: Assembling the top

It's made with 50 5" charm squares along with a little extra yardage...perfect for a quick baby quilt!

I am tempted to hit my scrap box and quickly sew one up.

I ended up using a favorite quilt design and some pastel variegated thread.

All in all it's a great little quick and easy baby quilt. I want to try this out only make it bigger. It would be a great scrap buster!!

As shown here it finishes at about 40" x 40". I think Kayla named it appropriately as it truly can be made in a weekend, made with charm squares and is charming...and that's Weekend Charmer.

I'll add this to the free pattern section in case you want to find it again.
