

On the Frame...

Sunday morning I was up early before church. I couldn't sleep so what's a better task than to start in on some charity quilts. This one was already on the frame so it was easy to quick tackle it before church. I even got it off the frame.

I started loading the next quilt but it had to stop and get ready for church. While driving to church I got a message from the neighbor girl. She was at my house and wanted to know where I was. I told her I was going to church but to come back to my house at 12:30 and she could eat lunch with us...so she did.

After lunch we went up to sew. We got the batting loaded and away I went. She was a great help. She filled bobbins. She took the lint roller and roller the quilt. She released the clamps and helped the machine get reset for the next pass.

Isn't this quilt fun? Neighbor girl loves it.

If you check out the close up, you can see why. The entire quilt features candy related fabrics. So precious!

I am so happy to be back to working on charity quilts. I'm hoping to get a few more done this week. I can't tell you how happy I am to have taxes behind me and have a little more free time again. I vow every year to try to stay a little more on top of things... I do really good for the first part of the year and gradually I slip more and more until the end of the year comes and I'm behind.

Volunteer binders, watch your mail as hopefully next week I'll have a couple boxes of quilts to send out.
