

Stash Report

I ran to do errands on day last week after childcare. Happily my favorite thrift store is open until 6pm so if I can get out the door at 5pm-make the half hour drive-then I have 30 minutes to shop. I love that they are open until 6pm now.

Anyway...check out my treasures. Fabric bags for $1 each. I've been starting to collect novelty prints. I want to do a baby quilt that has the letter "A" and then is surrounded by novelty print pieces that have items that begin with that letter.

I could see that there were quite a few novelty prints included in the bags so even though I didn't need any more fabric, I bought them...Check out some of the goodies. This will help my collection for sure.

I also found bags of buttons. There were several more bags there but I didn't NEED any more buttons. I just like them. All of my button collection has lost all of the color too so these will add some color. I do anticipate my button box getting more use in the future as Carver gets older and I need to entertain him in the sewing room. These bags were very colorful.

I have always wanted a pincushion collect but surprisingly I never find them. This day I did. See the chair pincushion? It was 50 cents.

I also found this crocheted "bag" of marbles. I don't know what I'm going to do with it but I thought Kayla would love to see it. I think it suppose to be a turtle. There's kind of a head where the drawstring closes. Interesting...

I love my thrift stores...Everyone tells me I have the best ones, and truly, I do.
