

Stash Report

I told you last weekend we went to Minnesota for a baby shower for my niece Ariel. Well we left as my sister left. We take many of the same roads home only she keeps going after I turn off. We were first to leave but they were right behind us.

We needed gas so stopped off in Albert Lea, Minnesota to get it...they went on and we waved as they passed. About 45 minutes later we were to Mason City and I begged the girls for a chance to stop at JoAnn's. I needed a muslin for an upcoming project I'll be starting soon and needed quite a bit of it. I have all sorts of muslin here but it's all in 1/2-2 yard pieces and I needed more.

Imagine our surprise when we walked into JoAnn's and there was my sister and the crew she traveled with. They were needed a few things including some things for my sister's grandchildren for camp which they were leaving for the next day.

Here's the goodies I found...

For some reason the colors didn't show up the best. There is a half yard of the colored prints all in rainbow colors. The teal (blue) has more in case I bind the project in that. The muslin is 5 yards worth...the bottom one is grey. I know it looks more brown in the photo but it's actually grey.

I was really happy with my finds. This is the start of two fun projects I have planned. I drew them out last weekend and now I have fabric. Now I just need time.

As we left we said good-bye to my sister and crew. They were still shopping. There are four of them and all are crafty. There were four of us but I was the only one feeling crafty.

Stay tuned if you want to see what new projects I'll be working on soon.
