

Stash Report

I don't need any more fabric...none at all. But how can I pass up a bag of fabric on a garage sale for 25 cents. I can't.

The bag was tied shut so I have no idea what was in it. I just knew there was fabric.

I was happily surprised to find good quality fabric and some beads too. The beads were mostly pony beads that I put in with the childcare goodies. They love stringing beads.

So tell me...would you pass up a bag of fabric for a 25 cents even if you already had plenty of fabric?

I don't know what it is about me but I love a deal...not the deal at the clothing store where a shirt is priced at $30 and is always 50% off....I mean thrifting deals. I'm addicted...Not is a scary hoarding way...but addicted none-the-less. Right now my favorite finds are childcare things and sewing things...an clothes for Carver.

One day thrifting I found these awesome dinosaurs. They go together kind of like a puzzle.

The same day I got a doctor kit and a lego set. The kids have been so happy with all of the goodies. At my thrift store, these went for $2.50. Things are priced to sell and they really do sell. I love that they take the profits and put it back into the community too.

I can't tell how many days that finds I've come up with have put a smile on face...dare I say it's almost like a drug. Oh well...there are worse habits. Thankfully mine is within my budget and doesn't hurt anyone.

Back to my fabric though...I counted and it's about 2 1/2 yards worth...25 cents. Who can beat that??