

Tackling all those Quilt Magazines...

Over the weekend I FINALLY tackled my quilt magazines. I am one of those quilters and just can't part with patterns that I love...but the magazines can get overwhelming.

I rip the patterns I like from magazines. I put them in sheet protectors and then into binders. When I started this process a year or so ago, I tried to be SO careful sorting the patterns into binders by category, but last night, by the time I was finishing up, I was just glad to have them in a binder.

I did sort one category though...carefully, I looked at the patterns for projects I could use as leader and ender projects.

Here's a four patch quilt that is working it's way to the top of my leader and ender project list. I am SO happy to say that all patterns are now coraled into one spot...

on the sewing room shelf. I am so happy...now back to sewing.
